A WORKING FRAMEWORK

The Memorable Business Framework

Why people visit your page but never message you.

Most business owners assume a quiet inbox means people don't want what they're selling, or think it costs too much. Usually it's neither. People forget you before they ever get to the point of sending a message, because nothing about the visit gave them something specific enough to hold onto. Attention fades fast, usually within days, if nothing about you stuck.

01

The Attention Gap

A visit that doesn't leave behind one clear idea won't survive the scroll to the next post. If a stranger couldn't repeat back what makes you different in one sentence, nothing stuck.

---

02

The Proof Gap

Years of experience and a warm bio don't make you stand out from the next ten pages they'll scroll past today. A specific number, a named result, or a real client detail does.

---

03

The Next-Step Gap

Visitors don't take three actions from one page. A bio link, a caption, and a story highlight all pointing in different directions lets people leave without deciding anything, which they read as your indecision, not theirs.

04

The Follow-Up Gap

Even a genuinely interested follower forgets within days without a reason to keep thinking about you. No DM starter, no follow-up message, no way to hold onto that interest, means losing it to time, not to a competitor.

HOW TO USE IT

Most businesses lose visitors at one gap more than the others. Read through once for recognition, then use the worksheet on the next page to find which gap is actually costing you the most, and fix that one first.

THE WORKSHEET

Apply it to your own page

Answer each honestly before you change anything.

01

The Attention Gap

In one sentence, what makes you different from the next page someone will scroll past today?

---

02

The Proof Gap

What's the most specific, concrete proof you have, a number, a name, a result, that you're not currently using anywhere visible?

---

---

03

The Next-Step Gap

Right now, how many different actions could someone take after landing on your page, comment, DM, tap the link in bio? What's the one you'd point them to first?

---

04

The Follow-Up Gap

If someone scrolled past today without messaging you, what's the only way you'd have to reach them again? If the answer is none, that's the fix.
